

Last weekend I started off Friday seeing a couple of friends I grew up with and get dinner together and enjoy some quality time before we headed to a bachelor party the next day. A close friend of mine is getting married in England and we had the bachelor party in Denmark before we fly to the wedding in two weeks. Im excited since will be my first time going to England where I am not having a layover.

Sunday I spent some time with amazing people who have my whole heart, and we had a blast! Most of them are now getting girlfriends, and it's such a wonderful feeling when they fit well into the group. We gathered on the longest day of the year to celebrate Saint Hans.

Fundraising is a slow but steady progress. I'm at the halfway point, which means I'm now missing $500 in monthly support to apply for my visa.

I have been getting a bit worried, but over the last month, God has really been emphasizing that I should trust Him through the process and that He will be the one to provide! The phrase "Trust in God" has been what I have been hearing. I will still be doing my part to reach out and ask for support but trust in He has got the rest!

Since the last time I finished my website, I will primarily be updating it when I move to Colorado Springs. The newsletters will still be sent out via email, but you will also be able to see previous newsletters on the website. I have posted one blog that goes into detail on why I went on SBS and to show that there will be more posts like that and vlogs in the future. I have spent a lot of time making this work, and hopefully, it will be as exciting for you as it was for me to create it.

My youngest sister received a diploma from her school, and we went to see her receive it. It was an honor to see how my sister is growing up. She is now 18 years old, has her driver's license, and will graduate next year. How time flies! I am so thankful to be here and be a part of it before going out on missions.

My other sister has been accepted into Bethel Bible College and will be going around the same time as me. I am so excited to follow along and see what God has in store for her there!
